Short bio

I am an anthropologist with specialization in Science and Technology Studies (STS). In the last years I have been developing a 'how-to' anthropology of inclusive urbanism and DIY ecologies of support, undertaking ethnographic and archival research on accessibility struggles and the design and maintenance of sidewalk democracy projects in Europe, with a special focus on Barcelona (Spain). In particular I'm interested in their two-fold 'how-to' dimension: as forms of 'technoscientific activism'—showing how to challenge technocracy through the circulation of traces and records of this experience-based knowledge in particular documentation interfaces—; and as 'DIY ecologies of support'—exploring different self-experimentation methods, as well as sites and encounters to elicit bodily diversity and the appropriate socio-material affordances to host it. I'm also interested in the effects this particular 'how-to' activist culture around inclusive urbanism and DIY ecologies of support has on both (a) the education and sensibility of designers, requiring particular pedagogic experiments and situations to come to terms with bodily diversity and multi-sensory environments; and (b) ethnographic fieldwork practices and devices, leading social scientists not only to explore different forms of 'joint-problem making' in the field, but also to experiment with meeting formats, types of records and accounts, for such an ethnographic engagement to matter in the search for a diverse common world.

Academic interests

Anthropology & STS; Critical Disability Studies; Design anthropology; Technoscientific activism; Inclusive urbanism; Ecologies of support; Ethnographic experimentation.

Education

October 11th 2012: PhD in Social Anthropology (Cum laude, highest distinction), Department of Social Anthropology, Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. Supervisor: Prof. Dr. Álvaro Pazos. Title: "The logics of telecare: The fabrication of 'connected autonomy' in telecare for older people".

October 13th 2005: Licenciatura (BA) in Psychology (Socio-cultural Psychology), Universidad Autónoma de Madrid. 1999. International Baccalaureate in Social Sciences. IES Ramiro de Maeztu, Madrid (Spain).

Positions held

April 2018–: Senior researcher (E13/5 TV-L) at the Chair of Urban Anthropology, Institute of European Ethnology, Humboldt-University of Berlin.
